LIBERTY TRUCK, AMERICA'S BEST, REACHES FRANCE

Features of All Standard Makes Embodied, New Wrinkles Added

NOISELESS AS TOURING CAR

Lubrication System Easily Got At Steering Wheel Equalized, Double Ignition System

The first of the new Liberty trucks which will eventually be standard for the entire A.E.F. has arrived at a base the entire A.E.F. has arrived at a base port.

This forerunner of thousands of its kind has aroused the greatest entiustassam among chauffeurs and motor experts who have seen it in action. It has all the power possible and all its parts are as rendily accessible for repairs and oiling as a trick racing car or even a Ford. The best features of all the standard motor trucks on the market are embodied in the new Liberty truck, and some new wrinkles that will eliminate many of the difficulties encountered in actual warfare have been added.

The Liberty truck is the result of a conference of all the big automobile engineers of the United States and the Army experts of the Motor Transport Corps with the object of producing a standard motor truck for the Army that would be the best American genius could preduce that would be the best American genus could produce.

The automobile engineers laid bare all their professional secrets and gave the best of their talent for the solution of the Army's difficulties with commer-cial trucks. Their slogan, and that of the M.T.C., was, "Let's go!"

Real Golden Silence

What will endear the new truck to the heart of everybody who distikes the careless whizzing shell is its noiseless-ness in operation. Instead of chattering around Dead Man's Curves like a runa-way junk wason, to the great annoy-ance of the Boche and the consequent activity of his batteries, the Liberty truck will pure along as noiselessly as the finest touring car, the motor ex-perts say.

Annor advantages which are in Among advantages which are instantly appreciated by chanfleurs and repair men is the ready accessibility of the lubrication system. The springs, for one thing, are kept constantly lubricated by an oil box which sends the oil to the springs by a hollow spring hanger. The entire transmission gear can be oiled by simply pouring in the oil through a filler cap on the outside of the frame.

ame. excing wheel is so well equaliz The steering wheel is so well equalized and adjusted that even though the truck is leaded to its capacity, it can be steered with the same case as a touring car. There are double spring bumpers on both the front and rear to eliminate smashing of the trucks in case of a collision. The motor itself is brand new and of special design, with the least possible vibration and noise in action.

Specially Designed Lights

Specially Designed Lights

All parts of the truck can be easily removed for repairs. The motor is east in block with removable heads so that the valves can be ground and carbon scraped as readily as on a Ford. The radiator is of a special type with a shutter that can be drawn over it in coil weather to prevent the freezing of the radiator. A double ignition system is employed, with batteries and high tension magneto giving two spark plugs to each one of the four cytinders. The two plugs operate at the same time, so that if one system goes out of commission, the other will carry on.

Specially designed lights of low power are attached to the front of the truck and throw a small circle of light in front of each wheel. The driver is thus enabled to pick his way along a road pitted with shell heles without revealing himself to the enemy because the lights cannot be seen at a few hundred yards on a dark night.

There is no self starting device to get out of order on the truck, and the motor may prove a little stiff to turn over on a cold morning, it must be admitted. But for the rest, it has all the attachments except those for golf clubs and lunch hampers.

THE TWO GERMAN OFFENSIVES NO A.E.F. CAMPAIGN

ECHOES FROM THE ARGONNE FIGHT

An American private spied a rooster gressed, he might possibly have noticed prowling around a farm house in No Man's Land just after the Americans had captured Very. Being angry, and having an appetite for roast chicken, this American private decided to crawl up on the rooster and trap him in the building. The American was about to lay his hands on the astonished rooster when a ferman entered the rear door of the building bent on the same mission. Both were so surprised that they stood for a moment and glared at each other, then the American motioned for the German in do a right flank on the prey they were after and both closed in on him, the rooster was captured by the American, who later returned to the American lines with both rooster and German in tow.

Later, at the regimental P.C., the German rousted the chicken for his captor, who shared it with him.

The following letter was written by an American soldier to his mother in California a few hours before the beginning of the Araonne drive.

"Dear Mother: We are going in to battine the Boohe tonight. It is our first time in, as you know, so of course I am thinking of you more or less. But don't forget, Mother, my thoughts are of you. "I am taking advantage of a few hours' rest and writing to you as I know you are always wanting to hear from me. But don't worry one bit, Mother dear. If the Boches get me I will get ten of them while they are about it.

"This will be all until next time."

"Lovingly, "Bennie."

The "next time" never came for Ben-

"Bennic."
The "next time" never came for Bennic. When the burlal squad found this letter in his shirt, pocket he was lying with his face toward Germany, his right front finger pressing the trigger of his rifle. A few yards in front of him was a German muchine gun nest. There were nine dead Germans in the pit.

One Artillery unit worked hard during he afternoon of the second day of the the afternoon of the second day of the attack to get its pleces into position. It had moved up for the second time, and had not fired a shot.

It was four o'clock when the lieutenant in command gave orders for every one to stand by. The guinners were to fire their first volley into the German lines.

A Pioneer private paused, pick above his head, when he saw the sudden flare of light.

"Hey, you rube!" he shouted. "What are you trying to pull off down there? Do you want all the German artillery in the country turned on us? Can that stuff or I'll come down and kick a lung out just to pass the time."

There was no reply. But the light went out.

A Yankee truck driver's right forward wheel had just sunk with an air of finality into a half-filled shell-hele on the road near Avocourt, and he was throwing over a terrific barrage of profamity when he suddenly stopped short and his jaw dropped.

Then it closed in a grin as broad as the Sacramento, from whose distant shore he had gone forth to war. He was contemplating the approach along the roadside of four stalwart and imposing officers of the famous Prussian Guard. On their shoulders, as they marched along in the drizzling rain, was a stretcher, and on the stretcher lay a wounded doughboy smoking a cigarette.

When the mud is knee deep and German shells are falling all around, the officers in the line have been known to reflect andibly and surenstically on the laxurious life led by the staff officers far behind, and sometimes even to call those more secluded directors of the war by the disrespectful name of "Old Waffle-tails."

But one colonel from an American Army corps emerged from the fight near the Argonne with the glove torn from the back of his hand by a piece of shrapnel and a shattered riding crop as further evidence of a narrow escape.

FOR LIBERTY BONDS

But Soldiers May Buy Issue Under Present Allotment Plan

There will be no competitive cam paign for the sale of Fourth Liberty Loan bonds in the A.E.F. "Enlisted men who have but small margin of pay men who have but small margin of pay remaining after discharge of their fixed monthly obligations," G.O. 164 goes on to state, "will not be encouraged to assume additional burdens."

Steps, however, will be taken to see that members of the A.E.F. are instructed as to the character of the bonds and given every opportunity to subscribe. It is added that organization commanders will see that soldiers do not obligate their pay that they are unable to provide for their families.

Officers, enlisted men and permanent civilian employees may buy bonds on the Army allotment system, just as bonds of the Second and Third loans were bought. Men wishing to buy a $500 bond will, as formerly, allot $5, monthly for nine months and $4.83 the tenth month, and the proportion will hold for purchases in higher multiples of $50.

hold for purchases in higher multiples of $50.
Such allotments are to be charged on payrolls and pay vouchers beginning with those for October, 1918. The formula to be used is: "To the Secretary of the Treasury for purchase $50 Fourth Liberty Loan Bond, 1 coupon detached." Company funds, surplus exchange and generan mess funds may be invested in Liberty bonds and War Savings Stamps with the approval of the company, exchange or mess councils of administration.

One of the hardest jobs any one had in the first drive west of Verdun was the job of a grizzled old mess sergeant in charge of a roadside kitchen set up to nourish, at proper intervals, a company of Engineers at work on the roads. He had just enough rations to feed them for one day, and, except for the occasional cansuls any kitchen can handle, he knew he must refuse all stragglers.

Yet his kitchen was in full sight of the road, along which all day long there straggled those slightly wounded young-sters from the line who were quite able to foot it to the nearest ambulance camp. Some of them had had nothing to eat for three days. Every one of them, at the smell of the hot coffee, would stop wistfully and ask for a bit of bread or something. Always the old sergeant had to shake his head. By moun he had aged ten years.

"It'll kill me yet," he said at last. "I know they have only to cross the least crest to find food and drink a-plenty, but I remember how my mother never turned any one from her door who asked for something to eat. They might be burghars, but she wouldn't take a chance."

A young sergeant from Baltimore limped on his way. The mess sergeant could hear him explaning to the other wounded boy with him.

"We can't blane him. If he fed us, he'd have to feed them all, and the, where'd he he? I guess he's a good old scout, at that." MAIL ENQUIRIES MOST WELCOME
